Anderson Construction Group wins Master Builders' 2009 Best Major Remodel

Seattle, Wash. – The Master Builder's Association of King And Snohomish Counties honored Anderson Construction Group, Inc. with its 2009 award for Best Major Remodel Above $600,000 at its annual Remodeling Excellence Awards (REX) banquet held Saturday, June 20th at the Lynnwood Convention Center in Snohomish County.

The judging panel of the annual competition consists of local and national remodelers, media experts, architects, and interior designers.

The REX Awards is an annual event that recognizes the best in local remodeling projects. This prestigious award is the highest level category of the REX awards that was pursued by hundreds of worthy general contractors, but handed to only one- Anderson Construction Group.

“We were very excited to take away the MBA’s top renovation award from the REX Awards this year,” says D. Chad Quilici, a principal at Anderson Construction Group. “It reaffirms what we set out to do each day- build the best project we can for each and every client.” The winning project this year was a complete renovation, restoration, and addition of a 1926 home in the historically preserved Washington Park neighborhood of Seattle while replicating and preserving details that created its period architecture.

About Anderson Construction Group, Inc: Building custom homes and commercial projects around the Puget Sound region of Washington State, ACG’s dynamic teams are ready for the challenge of the most complex of projects. With a focus on professional project management and the uncommon understanding of today’s technical building systems and applications, ACG builds beyond its competitors. The results of this finely tuned process are always the same- buildings that positively shine. This approach has led ACG to the forefront of construction and to the Puget Sound Business Journal’s Fastest Growing Private Company List of 2008.
